

Brexit: Tactics for every business, everywhere

With just weeks to go before the UK is set to leave the EU, the state of readiness for the ongoing risk of no deal varies across sectors, operating models and geographies. Businesses should use the time up to 31 October to reset and re-engage with their no deal planning. Brexit poses variable levels of risk and opportunity depending on a range of factors. With limited time left, it won't be possible or necessarily advisable for companies to implement major mitigation plans. However there are some short term tactical actions that can realistically be achieved in the timeframe that will make a difference to an organisation's Brexit resilience. The following is a checklist against which to assess your preparations, or to prioritise those areas you are yet to consider:

How can Deloitte help?

We are a leading voice in navigating Brexit considerations with business and governments. The experience and expertise of our multi-disciplinary team means we can partner with you to confront the short term challenges of a no-deal Brexit, and to develop longer term plans to adapt to a new UK/EU relationship.
